

DUTJAHN

SANDALWOOD OILS

Dutjahn

The Aboriginal word for 'Sandalwood' in the Martu and Wongi language. It is a sacred tree that has been revered for thousands of years.

A time-honoured oil, enriched by the traditional lands of Australia.

Dutjahn Sandalwood Oils was created to honour this legacy.

As an equal partnership between Traditional Custodians and cultivators of the Australian sandalwood (Santalum spicatum) tree, we fuse these supply chains to create unique essential oils.

Slow-distilled by provenance and sourced with care, our oils are created to ensure people and nature can thrive for generations to come.

A company built on mutual respect and ethics.

- 50% Indigenous-owned and led.
- Aboriginal people benefit through profit-share, wood sales and royalties for community projects.
- Protecting threatened cultural practices.
- Preserving biodiverse desert ecosystems.
- Regenerating devitalised farmlands through cultivation.
- Transparent and ethical supply chains.

A transformational nature-positive model: Winner UN Equator Prize.

As Custodians of Dutjahn, Aboriginal people are leading the creation of a fairer sourcing system that gives life to the people, animals and lands connected to sandalwood - not just today, but for generations to come.

We were humbled to win the United Nations Equator Prize for this work to address inequality, stem biodiversity loss and take climate action.

Creating bright futures on healthy sandalwood country.

When you use Dutjahn oil, you contribute to the Dutjahn Foundation - an independent Aboriginal-led not for profit.

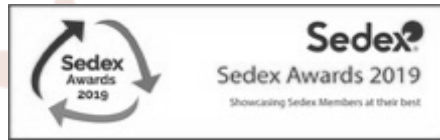

Together with community, they are creating bright futures for young Martu to reimagine their ancient culture and care for their rich, biodiverse country - area larger than California.

From little things, big things grow.

By adopting a journey of learning and discovery, we work to improve our quality, ethics and sustainability. Last year we were honoured to attain the first UEBT Verified Responsibly-Sourced Sandalwood oil.

The Australian standard for sustainable forests, timber and paper.
